It will be readily understood that so far as the Democrats were concerned, it was a labor of love. A quarter of a century is a long time to be out of power, and the Eestoration was to them an event of extraordinary interest and pleasure. Some, who remultted their enthusiasm to outrun their discretion, wanted to make the Inreguration an occasion of party rejoicing; but the good sense of the committees curbed their apatient ander, and all suggestions looking to such a demonstration were gently but firmly laid on the table. A large number of Republeavs were appointed upon the various com-

entrying out of the program. For two or the e weeks past the greatest activity in the work of preparation has everywhere been shown. Arrangements were unde for the accommodation, with "bed and board," of the tens of thousands of visitors who were expected to throng the city. The people of this city are thriftily inclined. Mr. Hendricks, the junior partner in the new Presidential firm, reached the city Friday afternoon. He was met at the depot by a committee of citizens and escorted to his hotel with a procession of carriages, headed by a band, and flanked on either side by the usual motley crowd of blacks and whites, who divided their | Kelly time between admiring the pompous Drum-Major and trying to get a peep at the face of the distinguished Indianian through the carriage windows. He was enthusiastically received at Willard's Hotel, and during his stay there with his wife received much attention, Mr. Cleveland arrived Tuesday night and was greeted with a tremendous ovation that has rarely been equaled in the history of the country. The city was full of people-political, military, and civic clubs and organizations of every kind, and thousands upon thousands of individuals. All in the great multitude were bubbling over with enthusiasm and good feeling, and the coming of the President-elect was made the occasion for a general rejoicing. Washington never saw a heartier welcome extended to any man.

The official program on Wednesday was arranged similarly to those of former inaugurations, and was carried out strictly in accordance with the forms prescribed by law and established by custom. The President and the President-elect were escorted to the Capitol with great pomp. The Vice-President was first sworn, in the Senate Chamber, and at 12 o'clock the new President was clothed with the burden of office in the manner of his predecessors, and immediately proceeded to the delivery of his inaugural address. It was listened to with the closest attention by a large and interested audience. This over the great parade reformed and moved west on Peansylvania avenue, sweeping up by the Treasury and past the White House, where it was reviewed by the new President, then out to Washington Circle, and through Connecticut and Massachusetts avenues to Fourteenth street, where it was dis-

The parade is considered by many to have been the finest seen in the streets of the Capital since the armies of Meade and Sherman bore their triumphant banners aloft "with proud and gallant tread," after the collapse of the rebellion. The military part of the column was especially fine, and elicited hearty applause. Nothing could be more martial in H. Paimer, appearance than the great body of Pennsylvania State troops. Other "fancy" organizations made a greater show of gaady plumes and cockades and brilliantly colored uniforms, but to the eye of the old soldier there was nothing so inspiring as the steady, swinging step of those strong battalions of Pennsylvamians. It was like the sweep of an old army corps. Everywhere along the route of the parade the streets were literally choked by the multitude of spectators, and it was only with the greatest difficulty that a passage was made for the moving column. The utmost enthusiasm and good feeling prevailed, The early part of the evening was devoted

In the arrangement of the order of march in the Inaugural parade there was a great deal of scrambling on the part of the numerous organizations for a place in the first division, to which was assigned the honor of escorting Guard Capt. Bean the President and President-elect from the White House to the Capitol. Several of the old Damocratic clubs, which for many years have borne the burden and heat of the day, and whose conspicuous service during the campaign contributed so largely to the sucess of Mr. Cleveland, urged with great zeal their claims to share this honor. They went so far as to protest against the assignment of the Grand Army of the Republic, whose members here are

WEDNESDAY, Feb. 25.-In the Senate there was quite a heated debate on the conference report on the Army Appropriation Bill, and the House provision to enable courts-martial to control the hours of their own session instead of being limited as now, to the hours from 8 a. m. to 3 p. m., was finally stricken out. Mr. Allison, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported the Legislative, Executive, First troop Philadelphia City Cavalry, Capt. | and Judicial Appropriation Bill, and asked its immediate consideration. Considerable discussion arose on the question of putting on the annual rolls the per diem clerks, and Mr. Gorman expressed the hope that the expenses of the Senate would not be further increased. The amount now paid for clerks and messengers to committees of the Senate, he said, was $57,000, against $38,000 for similar services in the House of Representatives. After debate, the motion to suspend the rules and refer the bill was lost. FEIDAY, Feb. 27.—The Senate passed the Naval Appropriation Bill substantially as reported by the Senate Committee on Appropriations. The remainder of the session was devoted to the consideration of pension bills. By unanimous consent it was decided to consider bills favorably reported from the Pension Committee, and a number were passed. House bill was also passed, giving a pension of $50 a month to Mrs. Emily L. Alvord, widow of Gen.
